LABOR BILL AFFECTS PINEAPPLE INDUSTRY

IF PASSED WILL THROW HUNDREDS OF CHILDREN OUT OF EMPLOYMENT.

Between fifteen hundred and two thousand school children, ranging in age from twelve to fifteen years, will be deprived of an opportunity to engage in profitable employment for several weeks during vacation each year, if Senator Coke's bill regulating the hours of labor of female children under sixteen years of age becomes a law. This is the claim made by those who are now said to be organizing to defeat the measure.

Not only will this be the result, they say, but the pineapple growers and canners of the Territory will find themselves seriously crippled in their efforts to handle their product at the busiest time of the year.

"For several weeks each year," said a pineapple grower and canner yesterday, "it is necessary to work at capacity, twenty-four hours a day in the summer and night and day so far as possible in the fields. Unless this was done our fast-rising crop would perish. It is difficult to secure sufficient labor during these brief periods even with the aid of young girls."

"The work is not hard on the children. On the contrary they seem to enjoy it as a pleasant change from their school routine. Besides, they are well paid and their earnings often go far toward keeping them in school for the balance of the year."
